ARBUCKLE TELLS

Entirely a Matter of Business, With No Tinge of Philanthropy, He Says.

"THE TWO DON'T MIX."

Crop Reports Didn't Warrant High Prices, So He Nodded and They Fell.

By Ethel Lloyd Patterson.

Mr. John Arbuckle

can't BE MIXED.

The sugar trade — mounts to about $2.50 a barrel.

Down in his office near the river front, No. 71 Water street, John Arbuckle nods his head and calls for a messenger boy, and you pay this or that for the sugar in your coffee, according to his bidding. For the Arbuckle Brothers are so powerful in the trade that the Sugar Trust must perforce meet any "cut" they make, and, of course, it is only too willing to join 'n with any advance.

"There is a very pretty story going the rounds of Wall street," I told Mr. Arbuckle, "that when you returned though, on the other hand, a properly though, on the other hand, a properly

Here is a value in boys' suits without parallel anywhere. The fabrics are cold water shrunk, the tailoring of that character that has given Smith Gray & Co. a nation-wide prestige, and the fit and styling of which make them eminently distinctive. Gauged from any viewpoint the thrifty mother elects, this is a value that is unqualifiedly the best in New York. Motor Clothes for Owners and Chauffeurs one way to make philanthropy out of a Wall street deal. Make your money there, take it home and be as philan-thropic with it as you like. Now, I have a few little pet charities here and there around New York, but Wall street is not one of them. When I buy or sell stocks, it is for the same reason anybody else would—a straight business proposition."

So there was a sweet idea melted by a stream of cold facts.

"It is like this," said Mr. Arbuckle, and tapped thoughtfully on his desk with a paper cutter. "Sugar fluctuates in its price as much if not more than any other product. The supply is largely dependent on the German beet crop and the beet crop is in turn dependent when you drop price of sugar has been caused by your lump of sugar droughts in Germany and France. Should the German beet crop fall ensures of sugar in this countries of sugar in this countries. upon the weather. The present high your lump of sugar in your coffee.

For John Arbuckle is the man who recently forced the price of sugar from 7th cents down to 650 cents a pound in a single day. This is the heaviest cut the prophesied for some weeks."

Can a very dignified, elderly gentleman, who is many times a millionaire, chuckle? But perhaps I was mistaken. "Philanthrophy?" repeated Mr. Arbuckle. "Who ever heard of philanthropy in Wall street?
